

News

The Observer on Sunday is the only Sunday newspaper printed and published in the Cayman Islands in an innovative magazine format that combines journalistic integrity with ease of handling.

We want the Observer on Sunday to take the lead in analysing the significant, agenda setting stories that get the paper talked about. We also want to have a tone that is warm and engaging, encouraging our readers to spend more time with the news section in the same way they might with stand-alone magazines or the features section.

This modern, two-sectioned national title offers a combination of main news and special interest features. With 22,500 copies delivered for free to homes and businesses, the Observer on Sunday attracts over 40,000 readers each week.

Every week in the Observer on Sunday you will find Local News, Business & Finance, World & Regional News, People & Pictures, Opinion & Commentary, Science & Technology, Comics, Puzzles & Horoscopes.

The Observer on Sunday is part of Cayman Free Press which owns a number of publications including our daily national newspaper the Caymanian Compass.
